a key lever for cost control and brand reliability. Many buyers glance at the price column and assume the listed rate applies to the whole order. In reality, BJS Bakery offers tiered discounts that only kick in after a threshold quantity is reached. Ordering 48 croissants at the £1.20 rate instead of the £1.05 bulk rate for 50 + units adds roughly £9 to the bill. Failing to specify nut-free or gluten-free requirements forces the bakery to default to standard recipes, which may not meet a client's dietary policies. The resulting rework incurs an extra handling fee and can jeopardize compliance for food-service contracts. When the delivery slot is left blank, the bakery assigns a default time that may conflict with a retailer's receiving schedule. Missed windows lead to rescheduling charges that typically range from £15-£30 per incident. Some items are sold by the case, others by the individual piece. Selecting "case" for a product that ships individually inflates the order quantity and can cause inventory excess that ties up capital. Join me as I discuss the three pillars of
