The CONCACAF Nations League, launched in 2018, reshapes competition for North America, Central America, and the Caribbean by providing regular, meaningful matches that replace sporadic friendlies and ensure every member nation has a clear path to regional success. Before the Nations League, many smaller football associations struggled to arrange quality fixtures, leading to long periods of inactivity and limited development opportunities. The league's core purpose is to guarantee a minimum number of competitive games each year, fostering growth, improving rankings, and creating a more predictable calendar for clubs, broadcasters, and fans. Members are divided
